

New business venture brings exciting prospects for water damage restoration market

We are incredibly pleased to announce our strategic collaboration with leading provider of industrial heating, cooling, and thermal control technologies, DBK Group.

As of 1 August 2019, we will be working together on various exciting projects and business opportunities worldwide.

Both companies have a strong interest in developing the water damage restoration market with the synergies between our businesses acting as a catalyst for innovation and future product development in the restoration industry.

Alan James (currently Business Development Manager, DBK) will be joining Dantherm Group UK on 1 August 2019. He will assume his new role as Business Development Manager for water damage restoration products, focusing on growing the market share of Aerial, Master and Drymatic brands.

From a customer perspective, Alan James' transition from DBK to Dantherm should be seamless and Alan will become the Dantherm point of contact for all sales, technical and training requirements including Drymatic products.

AERIAL

 calorex

Dantherm

MASTER
CLIMATE SOLUTIONS

